

University of Dayton eCommons

Myth and Reality: Reflections on Our Travels
through West Africa

Center for International Programs

8-27-2019

Acknowledgments

Julius A. Amin

University of Dayton, jamin1@udayton.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://ecommons.udayton.edu/cip_ges_2019

Part of the Bilingual, Multilingual, and Multicultural Education Commons, Language and Literacy Education Commons, and the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning Commons

Recommended Citation

Amin, Julius A., "Acknowledgments" (2019). Myth and Reality: Reflections on Our Travels through West Africa. 3.
https://ecommons.udayton.edu/cip_ges_2019/3

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Center for International Programs at eCommons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Myth and Reality: Reflections on Our Travels through West Africa by an authorized administrator of eCommons. For more information, please contact frice1@udayton.edu, mschlangen1@udayton.edu.

Acknowledgments

Many people have contributed to the success of the University of Dayton's Global Education Seminar (GES) Africa program. Provost Paul Benson, and Associate Provost Amy Anderson have been leading proponents of the program. As members of the International Education Council (IEC), they along with the deans and other members of the leadership team championed the drive for internationalization on campus. GES began with China, South America, and later Africa. In its ninth year, the program is strong and thriving and thus it continues to be supported by its founders. The deans of the School of Engineering and the College of Arts and Sciences, Eddy Rojas and Jason Pierce respectively, did more than just support the initiative; they were present at the table when GES Africa was formulated; they visited South Africa and Malawi as part of the planning process. The staff at the Center for International Program (CIP), especially Karen McBride, Kelly Trail, and Elizabeth Hart, and Tim Kao have been very helpful throughout. And Sangita Gosalia, Director of Campus Engagement, did a marvelous job coordinating the program. She oversaw the orientation for GES Africa, arranged for guest speakers, and coordinated contact with foreign institutions.

The planning and implementation of GES Africa would never have succeeded without the help from colleagues on the other side of the Atlantic. We benefitted from the expertise of many in South Africa, Togo, Ghana, Malawi, and Cameroon, all countries we visited during the planning phase. We are most grateful to Richard Asante of the Institute of African Studies at the University of Ghana, who visited and spent time on our campus as we prepared. Fred McBagonluri, then of Ashesi University and now at Academic City College, is a University of Dayton alumnus and welcomed us in true UD style, with lots to eat and drink. Matt Maroon of Determined to Develop was a wonderful host as he took us to potential sites in Malawi. In Kara, Togo, Gnon Baba of the University of Kara treated us to the Togolese style of welcoming. The Marianist sisters, especially Sister Noellie Awilie, and the brothers at the Chaminade schools in Kara exceeded all expectations in welcoming us. We thank you immensely. We benefited as well from many colleagues at the University of Ghana, at Kwame Nkrumah Science & Technology University, at Academic City College, at Catholic University Institute of Buea, at Ashesi University, and at the University of Kara.

Many thanks to the students at high schools and universities in Ghana and Togo whose energy welcomed us and made us feel at home. You are the embodiment of the African spirit of community, a spirit that extends a welcome hand to visitors.

I extend our sincere thanks to the many others who assisted us in Ghana. Richard Kwesi Arthur explained pertinent cultural issues and suggested specific sites to visit. Kwame Bamfo Ahimah and Samuel Mensah ensured that we were safe as they drove us from place to place. Patrick Bediako Mantey drove us during both years we visited Ghana and Togo. A master at his craft, Patrick served as an unofficial in-country coordinator. He taught the cohort how to haggle in the open market, explained the culture, suggested sites to visit—and was always there. His ability to navigate the culture put at ease any anxiety of cohort members. We thank him immensely.

Finally, and as one of the biggest advocates for an African initiative on campus, I must thank my colleagues for looking beyond general society's perceptions to pursue the African experience. David Fine, Laura Leming, Minnita Daniel-Cox, Andrea Zavakos, Philip Appiah- Kubi, and Scott Segalewitz participated in the first GES Africa trip (May 12–June 2, 2018); participants in the second trip (May 18–June 7, 2019), were Joseph Day, Bobbi Sutherland, Denise Taylor, Martha Hurley, Sangita Gosalia, Rochonda Nenonene, and Sharon Davis Gratto. I facilitated both trips and believe each participant returned home with a little bit of Africa in them.

—Julius A. Amin

